

HOW TO SPOT AN OFFICIAL SOCIAL MEDIA SOURCE

Here are some quick and easy tips to help you spot an official social media page. These tips will help keep disinformation from spreading.

One way to tell a social media page is official is the check mark. Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram use check marks as a way to show you that the account has been verified and is the official page of a valid person/business/organization.

Another way you can tell a social media page is official is by this wording on the page: Official Twitter account of the Arkansas National Guard. (Following and/or Listing does not = endorsement.)

Still not sure the social media page you are looking at is official? Look for official logos and be sure to look for a link to the official website.
